From the President—

We are beginning our 22nd year as a Society and still going strong. We have learned a lot over the past years and how we are connected to other families in the county and across the country. We have so many more ways of finding information at the local level than we did 20 year ago. I made a lot of trips down highway 50 to Raleigh to NC Archives to get information that I was searching for in my family. Now you have all of the search sites on the internet to use, although you have to be careful to make sure the information is correct. Yes, another year and still finding more connections to our family tree.

We had a mild and short winter here in Granville County, so the weather did not hold us up in our researching. It seemed more like spring when the tornado came through the county. We had bad wind and hail with it. The storm tore up my roof so I had to have it replaced. With all of the hammering and nailing, I could not concentrate on my research for a whole week while they replaced the roofing. It was a good time to clean up the clutter that seems to pile up from unknown sources. Have been going through papers and throwing out what is not connected to my research. My recycle bin has been well used over the last four months. I still have to do the filing of the papers saved.

This quarter we were told that we had more books added to the North Carolina Room than any quarter before. Over 200 books were added. All of Stewart Dunnaway's publications were added. These include Mills, Ordinaries, Roads, and many other titles for all of North Carolina counties. A researcher's dream come true. Mark Pace is one happy camper with all of the additions. We will have a bigger addition coming in the next Newsletter.

When you are renewing your membership to the Society don't forget to state if you want your Journal and Newsletter by e-mail or printed. Please refer to the price changes on the website before writing your check so you will have the correct amount in the check. Allen has the price changes on the website to make it easier for you. Also it is inside on the back page of your Journal.

Make sure you have your correct address and zip code as well as your EMAIL address so we will have no problem getting the mailings to you. If you have not renewed your membership, do so now.

If you want to contribute an article for the Journal please email it to me at this email address, mildredgoss@nc.rr.com

Spread the word. We are looking for more members in our Society. Our membership is down after a lot of our members have passed away. If you hear of one person interested, please print a copy of the application from our website and give it to them to fill out and join us. There is an awful lot of information in our journals that will help everyone in their research.

Until next time happy researching. Mildred

In Memoriam

It is with deep sorry that the Granville Grays Chapter of the daughters of the Confederacy, records the death of Mrs. Caroline Crews Smith, an honorary member, who passed into Paradise on February ninth at the home of her son, E. L. Smith. She had been a member of the Chapter for years and loved "the Cause" for which it stood.

Her warm-hearted character and sweet modesty showed itself in her loyalty in every work undertaken by the Chapter. She knew the horrors of war and the greater hardships of reconstruction. Her patriotism never failed in war or peace and she ever kept sacred the memory of the dead, extending sympathy and help to the living.

Born of an old and prominent family, reared amid surroundings of affluence and ease, her girlhood environment suggested the setting which we associate with the antebellum life of the Old South. She lived to be eighty-two but old age never came neigh her, to the day of her last illness she was alive to her finger tips and crowned with many flowers, she passed into the beyond to hear her Master's welcome plaudit, "Well Done."

Piety and consecration to her church and her Master, best illustrated in human kindness and charity to her loved ones and neighbors, were her chief characteristics and her cheerful, unselfish, happy personality radiated sunshine, warming her many friends who loved her dearly.

And now that our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom and love has called to Himself in glory our beloved member, be it resolved:

First: That we as members of the Granville Grays Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, express our sorrow in the loss of so sweet and gentle a member and will ever cherish with grateful remembrance her unselfish inspiration and help.

Second: That the loving sympathy of the Chapter be extended to her bereaved family.

Third: That a copy of these Resolutions be sent her family, the Public Ledger, and a copy be spread upon the records of the Chapter.

Respectfully submitted, Jeannette E. Biggs, Elizabeth Floyd, Mrs. E. G. Moss

Copied from the Oxford Public Ledger. Mrs. Smith passed away in 1931.

GCGS Deaths for December 2015, January, February 2016

Editors Note: This listing shows the deaths from the obituaries of three newspapers (Oxford Public Ledger, Butner/Creedmoor News, Henderson Dispatch) for the specified time. Names are listed as they appear in the papers. Their listed age, whether they were Buried or Cremated (many people would be looking for a tombstone and gravesites with burials, but with cremations they need to look for a death certificate or an obit). The date of death and parents if listed. Some Funeral Homes do not list the parents.

Ten Documents Every Genealogist Should Acquire

March 18, 2016

Learn more about your ancestors with the help of this checklist compiled by Bill Dollarhide. They are places to look for a death record. All ten sources should be obtained for every ancestor on your pedigree chart, and every member of a family on your family group sheet.

1. Death Certificate. A rule in genealogy is to treat the brothers and sisters of your ancestors as equals. That means you need to obtain genealogical sources for all of them. For instance, for every ancestor on your pedigree chart, and for every brother or sister of an ancestor, you need to obtain a death certificate (assuming they are dead). If there were six siblings in an ancestor’s family, a death certificate for each brother and sister will give six different sources about the same parents; places where the family lived; names of spouses; names of cemeteries; names of funeral directors; and other facts about a family. If a death certificate for your ancestor fails to provide the name of the deceased’s mother, a sibling’s death certificate may give the full maiden name. How do you get a death certificate?

2. Funeral record. A death certificate may mention the name and location of a funeral director. A funeral record may include names of survivors; names of the persons responsible for the funeral expenses; and often, obscure biographical information about the deceased not available anywhere else. Modern funeral records are full of genealogical information about the person who died and may include copies of newspaper obituaries, death certificates, printed eulogies, funeral programs, and other details about the person. A reference to a burial permit, cremation, or cemetery can be found here as well. Generally, funeral directors are very easy to talk to and they are usually cooperative (they want your family's business). Even if the old name of a funeral home is not listed in a current directory, it should be possible to locate the current funeral home holding the records of an earlier one. These businesses rarely go out of business, but are more often taken over by another funeral director. If at one time a town had two or three funeral homes, but only one today, the Yellow Book listing is still the source for finding the current funeral home in that town, which can lead you to information about the older funeral home. Funeral directors are also experts on the location of cemeteries in their area.

3. Cemetery Record. If the name of a cemetery is mentioned on the death certificate or funeral record, that cemetery is now a source of information about the person who died. There may be a record in the sexton's office of the cemetery, or off-site at a caretaker's home; and the gravestone inscription may be revealing as well. When you contact a funeral home, ask about the cemetery where the person was buried, and whether they have an address or phone number for the cemetery office, or at least know who might be the keeper of records for the cemetery. At the same time, ask the funeral director for the names of monument sellers/stone masons who cater to cemeteries in the area. As a back-up, a local stone mason may have a record of a monument inscription for the deceased's gravestone.

4. Obituary. A newspaper obituary was probably published soon after the person's death. Old newspapers from the town where the person died are usually available at the local public library. They may be on microfilm. If the library responds but says it is unable to look for an obituary or make copies for you, then you may need to find a person living in that town to go to the library for you. One way to locate such a person is to write to a local genealogical society and ask if they know someone who can do a bit of research for you. Most genealogical societies have a volunteer who responds to such requests, and there will most likely be a small fee for this service. You may also find your genealogy friend on the Internet. Do a place search for people involved in genealogy in a particular place near where you need help, drop them an E-mail message and promise to do something in exchange for them. A huge collection of historic newspaper obituaries are now on the Internet.

5. Social Security record. If a person died within the last 35 years or so, the death certificate probably includes the deceased's social security number. With or without a person's social security number, you can write for a copy of any deceased person's original application for a social security card, called a form SS-5.

6. Probate Records. Details pertaining to a deceased person's estate may be located in a county courthouse. These records may provide important information about the heirs of the deceased. Probate records may include dockets (court calendars), recorded wills, administrator's records, inventories of estates, sheriff's sales, or judgments.

7. Private Death Records (Insurance Papers, Medical Records, Etc.). If the deceased had insurance, there is undoubtedly a record of the death within the insurance company's files. There may be much more information concerning the deceased's survivors, and the disposition of an estate. Hospital records are almost always closed, but a close family member may be able to get some information; and records at a Doctor's Office are also usually closed, but again, close family members may be given access. The cover sheet of a patient's file in a Hospital, Nursing Home, or Doctor's Office, is almost always the page containing vital information, including birth, marriage, divorce, occupation, health insurance, and name of closest kin or person to contact in an emergency. A close family member should be able to access that information.

8. Coroner and Medical Examiner Records exist for any person who died under suspicious conditions, or for whom an autopsy was performed or in most cases for people who died outside of a hospital. Coroner records are public records kept at the county level in virtually all states. In addition to the circumstances of the death, there may be vital details about the deceased. Locating a Coroner or Medical Examiner for a county is not difficult. Many have their own websites, or are part of a county government website.

9. Military Records for deceased veterans are public records. Write for a form SF-80 to request copies from any soldier or sailor's military file. Next of kin to a deceased veteran can access data online. Others need to use the SF-80 to obtain information about the deceased veteran.

10. Church Records. A death record may be recorded within a church's records, plus information about a burial.

Old Aunts Spent Last Days in Native Homes Oxford Public Ledger, September 30, 1974

Vertical Files, North Carolina Room, Richard H. Thornton Library, Oxford, NC

My mother had at Somerset, near Stovall, a large family of close relatives. My mother was born at Somerset, the old Wilson place, which Julian Wilson now owns and lives there alone since his wife Rachel (nee Howard) died some eight years ago.

There were four maiden ladies and one widow, "Sis", the oldest I did not know as intimately as the others. Aunt Grace was next, who always claimed that her would-be husband was killed in the Civil War, that was her story but the other sisters did back up her statement about this. Next came Aunt Clemmie, the 'peacemaker', who always poured oil in the troubled waters when arguments arose between the sisters. When Aunt Clemmie lay dying she would smile with the beautiful serenity which old people often develop and she would murmur 'You know I can't marry you, Tom Brown Venable, impossible, completely impossible.' Tom Brown Venable was a brother of Abram Venable, Granville's representative in the Confederate Congress, and he operated a private school on the ground where the present Hix School is now located. Aunt Clemmie was a very sweet old lady who lived quietly and died gently at peace with the world.

Next was Aunt Nannie, the widow, who married Archie Gregory during the Civil War and he lived only several years. Mr. Gregory had been married before and left numerous descendants including Charlie Lewis, who operated Stovall's only bank as a branch of the old "Bank of Granville."

There were several other sisters who married and left Somerset, but those remaining lived quietly, watched over carefully by Uncle Goodridge, the young brother and Aunt Margie, his wife, my aunt, and Julian's beloved mother.

All of those aunts sleep quietly in the old cemetery at Somerset surrounded by many others older and younger than they. There was a lot of living done at Somerset. It was the focal point for the young crowd in my early days, beautiful then and more beautiful now as Julian and Rachel spent quite a bit of time restoring and beautifying the old place, but changing nothing in the general looks of the place. It is centrally heated and cooled, completely renovated but would look exactly the same to any of these old aunts, could they return.

There are Rest Homes everywhere now but there was never any thought or plan to place one of the old aunts in a Rest Home. They lived out their day at home in familiar surroundings at peace with the world, and much loved by all who knew them.

They were the lucky ones, now the tendency is to put our old people in Rest Homes. Rest for who? Go to see them several times a year and rush away, very glad not to be troubled by these 'impossible' old people.

The world changes and we must change with it but rest homes are very distasteful to me. Necessary, I acknowledge, but housing so many people who lived active and useful lives. Young themselves one time but 'stuck away' now where they will not interrupt our modern way of life. You might like the idea of putting our old people 'out to pasture' but not me. To me it is selfish and disloyal to these people who have taken care of us and loved us. I am getting old myself but my beloved step-daughter and her kind, honest, and generous husband look after me and I do try to reciprocate and help them as much as I can.
